North, no South, but looks only to the reunification of the sections and a happy renewal of those kind relations that are secured for us peace and plenty at home, and a moral power among the nations that will find its footing on a common flag.

Disunion should be calm, and the masses should be informed. Every man should further the interests of that paper whose efforts tend to reunification and a reign of peace. All is, therefore, to be extended our attention to the masses who are the sufferers in National Disunion. And the cause that commends itself to the philanthropic and humanitarian; extend the sphere of intelligence, and that of strife grows less.

To those who will assist us in extending our circulation, we make the following liberal offer:

government has the right to make war against a State. A close examination of the Constitution, and the history of the Union, will show that the right of secession is not a right of the States, but a right of the Union. The
